Dear Members of the FatWallet Community:

Gofobo has been able to offer access to advance screenings and other promotional events offered by sources in the entertainment community. These sources have offered specific promotional opportunities for our membership to attend and have designated codes or passwords that allow you to do so.

These sources have set up the same opportunities with other promotional partners, i.e. specific codes for their membership or winners to obtain passes. In these instances the promotional partner gets value from posting the code or password on their site and traffic to their site derives the benefit of finding the code.

When Fatwallet members post codes, this deprives the original promotional partner assigned the code/password the value of traffic visiting their site, reading their paper or otherwise deriving value from working with these sources.

Our content sources have become increasingly concerned with the posting and trading of passes, code words or passwords on the Fatwallet forum. This has put what we offer our membership at risk.

We kindly ask you not to post, barter or sell codes or passwords that were intended for other promotional partners. These include, but are not limited to, posting codes from radio, print, retail, and online partners. However, we encourage you to post links to other promotional partner's sites, etc. so that other community members can obtain the code/passwords in a legitimate way that does not deprive this partner of the traffic intended for their promotion.

Please help us to continue providing you access to advance screenings and other promotional opportunities by adhering to the above guidelines.

Thank you for your continued support and patronage of gofobo.
